I am a dancer, choreographer, drummer, actress and teacher. I perfected myself in the United States after studying dance for 10 years in Buenos Aires. I specialize in the hooter style of Claqué and the development of its own body language starting from the interdiscipline and the fusion between different dances and arts.

I have extensive teaching experience, giving seminars, workshops and classes in the most important schools of Buenos Aires. I have danced among others, for the BBC and Tanguetto. I was part of the company Fuerza Bruta and Choque Urbano. I filmed numerous shorts and advertisements for brands such as Heinecken, Quilmes, Ford and Moleskine and was the face of the fashion brand Tramando by the designer Martín Churba.

I have been Drummer for the band Entre Ríos, poltamento, Castillo and founder of the group Yema, where I perform Research work on the relationship between movement, sound and image

I currently have my own contemporary dance company, creating music for dance pieces. I also have my own musical project.
